Literature and Writers in Times of Crisis

Konstantinos Poulis, author of Thermostat, a short story collection nominated for the National First Book Award, and Tax the rag pickers!, a political essay collection, presents a talk about the manner in which writers have been asked and forced to take sides on the Greek crisis. Who is to blame, and how do we respond creatively to the relevant agonies?

Monday, April 18, 4:30-5:30 pm
Downey House, Room 113

Presented by the Department of Classical Studies and the Allbritton Center